The New York Dynamiter.

NEW YORK, August 4.—All prominent Irishmen of the city deny any knowledge of Mooney, who tried to destroy the steamer Queen, yesterday. Condon, of the Irish World, says the man had no connection with that paper, and believes the society that Mooney claimed to represent is a myth.

Mooney's trunk was placed under examination, and were found to contain, among other things, chemicals and explosives with glass and brass tubes and gas pipe to be used in his notorious schemes.

Mooney was again arraigned in court to-day and there took occasion to say he is not a dynamiter, but a police officer exhibited his gun, and Mooney explained the action and told how the search in the bath rooms of the house where he lodged showed an account of the dynamite in the trunk, and that he had used. Then Mooney said he was the inventor, that these were parts of his experiment and that it was his gun engaged on a torpedo boat, and that he had received letters from the secretary of the navy about it. He had, he said, also been in communication with the secretary of the French navy. He had not yet secured a patent and did not want his business exposed. He was remanded for examination as to his sanity.
